Our school had a Heritage Day last week. In the morning, an old man called Hamoud told us about school in the past. There was only one teacher for all the classes, and students walked for an hour to reach school! Then we played old games that our grandparents played, like the stone game. After that, we ate traditional food - bread, dates and sweet halwa. Some mothers made it in the school garden. In the afternoon, every class sang an old Omani song. My class won first prize, and the head teacher gave us a big certificate. It was my favourite school day this year.
